'There's magic words everywhere' Kobias [3:11]

As summer approaches the four year old children at Reflections are well aware that they will soon be going to school. Many of them think about reading and writing. This year we have used our research room as a place for children to explore written language in many different ways - forming letters and words, interpreting different kinds of writing, making patterns with letters in 2d and 3d, offering props and spaces to develop role-play in which writing is important...and recording the emergent writing of each child in all its beautiful individuality.

'I just practised and practised until I noticed I could write. It doesn't matter if you scribble, you just have to practice so hard and you can do it.' Ela [4:7]

S

'I like writing sideways, and if I move it different ways the writing changes.' Daisy J [4:9]
